Sure, you get a high quality, four-panel screen to keep those nosy players out of your notes and to keep the really useful rules information right at your fingertips during play. Yet you also get two evenings of adventure. Included along with the DM's screen are The Shrine of Madness and Kadum's Horn, adventures for beginning to mid-level characters that introduce you to the unique dangers of the Scarred Lands campaign world. You also get fully detailed racial ability rules and racial descriptions for generating characters in the Scarred Lands or for use as optional rules for your own campaign world.
